

Internet Service Providers should remain classified as utilities under Title II. They should not be allowed to stifle competition on the Internet by shaking down every packet that passes through their infrastructure (if you don't know what a 'packet' is then you are unfit to work at the FCC).

Accounts by industry lobbying groups that discrimination and throttling would never happen are transparently disingenuous. It is the entire reason they are asking to be reclassified.

Keep the Internet open. Support net neutrality.
